Tidelands concerns property owners, sales

BY D.C. HARVILL
In the wake of the Public Trust Tidelands hearing held Tuesday in the Hancock County Courthouse, many people have expressed concern over the effect the tidelands issue will have on the local economy, especially on property sales.

While some have assumed an alarmist attitude, forecasting economic ruin, others are taking a more positive, wait and see approach to the situation.

Independent real estate investor J.P. Kennedy is among those predicting a bleak future for Hancock County property sales.

"Wednesday I lost two contracts as a direct result of the meeting Tuesday," Kennedy said.

"If the results of that meeting were so quick, I wonder what the real estate agents in the county lost. I wonder what the county lost in taxes. What about the contractors and the lumber companies?" he asked.

"It has a ripple effect," he claims.

"This whole thing has been handled wrong. If the secretary of state would come down here and make a simple statement he could clear up a lot of this," he said.

But, those who sell Hancock County property on a daily

Air conditioner stolen, recovered

BY ELLIS CUEVAS

A central air conditioner unit stolen from the Faith Assembly of God Church, Highway 43, Kiln, was recovered and returned Friday morning.

The sheriff's office received a telephone call at about 10:30 a.m. reporting two subjects were removing an air conditioner from the church, Nathan Hoda, Hancock County criminal investigator said.

"A description of the vehicle was given and officers were told the air conditioner unit was in the vehicle's trunk," Hoda added.

Hoda continued, "We had several deputies in the immediate area and the vehicle was spotted by a unit at a county lounge and two suspects fled into the woods when they saw the officer's vehicle."

The vehicle was impounded and the air conditioner was recovered and returned to the church.

Pastor Edward Stewart said he was surprised by the visit of a deputy sheriff who told him one of his church's air conditioning units had been stolen earlier in the day.

The two suspects are still at large Hoda said Saturday, and the case is still under investigation.

JUST TAKING A BREAK—During the dedication of Waveland's new municipal pier Saturday, Peter Murphy, 3, takes time out from fishing to kick back and relax. "He isn't catching any fish, but the fish are catching a lot of his bait," his mother, Rachael, said. ## Waveland to assume animal shelter control

BY DENA BISNETTE

Although there has been no official response from Bay St. Louis and Hancock County, the tri-entity animal commission that included Waveland will be without a shelter to operate as of Sept. 6.

A letter from Waveland Mayor John Longo Jr. to the Hancock County Board of Supervisors termed the commission, a 17-member group set up to oversee the operation of the county's only animal shelter, "a non-entity."

Longo has declared in several public meetings, most recently one with Bay St. Louis and county officials present, that Waveland is taking over the shelter.

The shelter is located off Gulfside Drive on Waveland property. It receives about $400 per month from each of the three entities, and all three contributed about $5,000 each to build it in 1983.

However, Longo has contended the shelter is too small to serve three entities and that Waveland is being forced to contribute more through the "unseen costs" involved in having the facility on city property, including such expenses as hauling away the bodies of euthanized animals and time that city employees lost from work trying to round up strays dumped at the shelter during the night.

In addition, the Waveland Board of Aldermen has adopted an ordinance that creates a five-member city animal commission and has instructed its tri-entity animal commission representatives to delay meeting until the matter of who controls the shelter has been resolved.

At the last scheduled commission meeting, no meeting could be conducted because none of the Waveland representatives attended. The tri-entity commission has a provision in its bylaws prohibiting meetings unless at least one representative from each entity is present.

Longo's letter, addressed to Board of Supervisors President Ronald Cuevas, stated: "After several meetings and considerable discussion, the board has determined that our participation in the Hancock Animal Commission, a non-entity, will dissolve as of Sept. 6, 1988."

"The shelter will then be managed by Waveland, and we will accept your animals until Dec. 31, 1988. The fee till then will be at present cost. After Dec. 31, 1988, we will negotiate."

"You will be contacted for a meeting of the animal commission for the distribution of remaining funds."

"We look forward to working together on a large modern Hancock County Animal Shelter soon."

Bay St. Louis Mayor Victor Franckiewicz Jr. has stated that he would be reluctant to break up the three-entity shelter, largely due to the expense involved in setting up a new shelter, and has expressed interest in a joint venture with the county.

The board of supervisors has not acted on the matter yet and has not discussed it in a formal meeting.

LOCAL BRIEF

SPECIAL MEETING

The Bay St. Louis-Waveland School Board will conduct a special meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the superintendent's boardroom at Bay Senior High School.

The items on the agenda include personnel and student transfers.

Parents may face fines, jail terms

Compulsory school attendance will be enforced

Hancock County Attendance Officer Frank McNeil

BY JANET MCQUEEN

The ring of school bells will toll a warning this year to parents of school age children who are not currently enrolled.

Frank McNeil, Hancock County School Attendance Officer, plans a more vigorous enforcement of the state's compulsory attendance law during the 1988-89 school year.

According to McNeil, ages of children covered by the law now encompass elementary, junior high and senior high levels. The Education Reform Act of 1982 mandated compulsory attendance statewide, which has been accomplished by increasing the student age covered by the law each year.

"Excessive attendance problems throughout the county are mainly confined to junior and senior high levels," said McNeil. "It will be necessary to quickly identify and investigate all cases of excessive absences to effectively deal with this problem. Early identification of high risk students with the cooperation of school personnel and family is essential."

An excessive absentee report will be submitted bi-weekly by school personnel to the attendance officer, who will in turn contact parents or guardians to discuss the problem.

If the absences continue, the matter will be referred to the court. Contempt of court in this case may carry a jail sentence of 90 days and fine of up to $500.00 for parents who fail to comply. In cases deemed Educational Neglect, McNeil is obligated to refer the matter to the State Welfare Department.

Youth Court Judge Michael D. Haas Sr. is adamant in his support of compulsory attendance, citing that "almost all of the delinquency cases" that he hears in court involve teenagers who are not in school. "They are unemployed and idle with nothing but time on their hands," he said, which in many cases will provide the impetus for delinquent behavior.

Haas is co-chairman of a Special Committee of Youth Court Judges drafting a "Parental Responsibility Law" to be introduced in the Mississippi Legislature during their next session.

"There is no doubt," he continued "that children who attend school regularly and devote proper attention to their studies are much less likely to get in trouble."

'Alternative School' planned for drop-outs, expulsions

BY JANET MCQUEEN
An "Alternative School" has been proposed as a viable alternative to the county's high drop-out ratio of high school and junior high students.

Hancock County School Attendance Officer Frank McNeil is "extremely enthusiastic" over the prospect of local school systems joining together to provide an environment for expelled, suspended or drop-out students to continue their education.

McNeil notes that many students drop-out because they have remained in the same grade level for too many years and are significantly older than their classmates. "A feeling of frustration sets in, causing the child not to participate or to create disturbances," he said.

Other problems are excessive absences, parent apathy and severe discipline problems.

Participating in the planning stage of the school are the Hancock County and Bay St. Louis School Systems, Youth Court personnel, teachers and concerned citizens. The State Board of Education has been contacted for funding and potential sites are being considered.

Illegal beer sales to minors reported

BY ELLIS CUEVAS

Hancock County Sheriff Ronald Peterson said Friday his office has received several complaints reporting beer purchases being made by minors from area outlets during the past month.

"It is illegal for a person under 21 years of age to purchase beer. It is the merchants' responsibility to make sure no beer is sold to anyone under the age of 21, I suggest merchants check identification cards," Peterson stated.

"The sheriff's department will be making checks of suspected violators," Peterson added.

Junior deputy sheriff's have been used in the past to make beer purchases at suspected establishments.

have no need to be concerned," she said.

"Until they come out with a ruling we'll just have to let people know that the thing is pending. We have started using disclaimers making people aware of what is going on. We try to advise them as best we can, but we really can't because no one really has an answer."

Not everyone is totally confused, Thiac claims.

"Most of your educated buyers know it isn't a problem exclusive to Mississippi, surrounding states are having the same problem," she said.

"I do think there are some people who are standing back waiting to see what is going to happen," she admits.

Not only is Frisbie optimistic about the effect on real estate sales, she also thinks that when the issue is settled no one will lose their homes.

"Some people may wind up with long term leases, like the ones for 16th section land, but I don't think the State of Mississippi is out to take anything away from anyone," she said.

"That is my opinion," she added.

"If you look at the history of the state leasing property, you'll see they almost give it away."

But, she admits, there is no way to be certain at this time what the future holds for property that is determined public trust.

"Until they render an opinion we have no way of knowing; we're just going to have to put faith in the state that they will do what's best."

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

The Fall season is not too far off with the slight coolness Friday morning in addition to seeing a student crossing US-90 and also noting a school bus in operation.

Traffic on our streets will be on the increase during opening and closing school hours and additional numbers of children will be walking and riding bicycles.

Motorists should use extreme caution as they travel and be on a special lookout for students.

We want everyone to have a very safe journey to and from school.

We would like to take this time to congratulate all students for continuing their educations.

This is the time to put forth best your efforts toward a very good education which will play an important role in your future.

Stay in school strive for educational excellence.

Hancock Countians have a reputation for helping those in need and the Food Pantry and its operation is a fine example.

Some 60 volunteers operate the Hancock County Food Pantry which is open from 9 a.m. until noon Monday through Friday behind the courthouse. In addition we have to think about the hundreds of others who make financial and food donations.

Since the Food Pantry has been in operation, some 5,900 deserving people have been helped and this is really reaching a large number of people.

Thanks to everyone for their help.

The meeting on Tuesday night of the Blue Ribbon Committee on Public Trust Tidelands at the Hancock County Courthouse just re-enforced the need in our county for a larger meeting place.

There appeared to have been more concerned residents who were unable to fit into the courtroom than were able to get into the area.

Many residents who were unable to get into the courtroom just turned away and returned home.

There are many people who own waterfront property, and they want to know whether the Tidelands ruling will affect their ownership.

It is hoped Secretary of State Dick Molpus will issue some hard defined lines on just what if any waterfront properties will be affected.

There have already been some real estate sales lost because of the Tidelands issue and this comes at a time when it is least needed.

Public hearings are good and we hope some of the input from Hancock Countians will be used when a decision is made.

We will be awaiting the secretary of state's report.

We are glad to see the U.S. Postal Service has contracted for the restoration of the Louis Raynaud mural in the old facility in Bay St. Louis.

I have admired the painting for many years and I am hoping the officials will see fit to place the mural in our new post office on U.S. Highway 90, as it has been part of our community for 50 years.

Our county can be very proud of the most modern and beautiful facility as there are not too many post offices with as beautiful a setting as ours.

The building's position behind those ancient live oaks could be referred to as a Post Card setting.

The mural could really add to the building's lobby, as it depicts our community many years ago.

WATERFRONT CLEANUP—Members of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's Beautification committee met on Friday to discuss preliminary plans for the September 24 Land a Hand in the Sand Keep Mississippi Coasts Clean Marine Trash Cleanup. The cleanup is sponsored by the Marine Trash Task Force, organized initially by Mississippi's Bureau of Marine Resources, the Gulf Islands National Seashore and Sea Grant Advisory. Among those attending were from left, Janet Aime, Jeanette Purchner, Jean Keen and Libby Milner. Individuals, groups, civic organizations, boy and girl scouts, school children, church groups and anyone else are urged to participate in the cleanup. Staging points and times will be announced later. (photo by Martha VanPeski)

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Clarification on tidelands controversy requested

Aug. 26, 1988
To the Editor

Dear Sir:

I am writing to you regarding the meeting I attended on Aug. 23 when the Commission on Public Trust Tidelands held its public hearing.

Based on what I heard and learned I might as well have stayed home. Based on what the commission accomplished, myself and other businesses may go out of business with a substantial loss of tax revenues to the state.

I am in the real estate business, waterfront lots only. As a result of recent publicity I lost three transactions this week. Multiply this by the 27 realtors in Hancock County alone, two or three surveyors and engineers, two dozen contractors, eight or 10 septic tank contractors, four or five well contractors, two or three tree removal contractors, five or 10 electrical and plumbing contractors, a dozen firms engaged in land clearing and crass cutting, eight or 10 lumber companies and hardware stores, four newspapers, attorneys, and on and on.

It is readily apparent to the casual observer the result that this meeting has had on the economy in one Coast county.

The impact would not have been the disaster it is, if the participants would have had some concrete answers as to what the state has in mind in sponsoring these meetings other than "formulating a policy on what the state's policy should be" on the tidelands.

Why all of a sudden has the Secretary of State's office become so concerned over a lack of policy? It has not had one since 1817. At the present time the Waveland Regional Waste Water Management District, with a grant from the federal government is installing sewer lines and tanks in one of the mentioned areas, Garden Isles. It doesn't make any sense that if a question of ownership is unresolved, that millions of dollars would be spent by anyone.

Today, after meeting and conferring with various business people directly involved in the outcome of these meetings, as well as property owners and residents, the consensus seems to be that an open letter or a statement by the Secretary of State's office to the newspapers here on the Coast is warranted, explaining in detail to the property owners and residents of Shoreline Park, Garden Isles and Herron Bay Estates, that their fears are unfounded regarding their property being in the so-called "public trust tidelands category" as long as they have a warranty deed and title to their property.

I then think the controversy among voters here on the Coast would resolve itself as quickly as the commission has stirred it up.

I shall look forward to hearing from Secretary of State Molpus as he is the only one who can set the tone and clear this matter up quickly.

With kindest regards,
J. P. Kennedy

The President's Column

My fellow Americans, you and I had the privilege of attending quite a party recently in New Orleans. I am talking about the Republican National Convention. And let me tell you, when the Grand Old Party throws itself a grand old party, it can even give the exuberant folks of New Orleans a lesson or two in how to have fun.

I was moved beyond words to see my very, very good friend and colleague George Bush accept the nomination for President. When I spoke to the convention, I said I wanted to work as a foot soldier in George's campaign. After hearing his speech, all Americans could see what I have seen for eight years—dedication, integrity and commitment to principle, a strong man and a strong leader.

I have said many times that George has the experience, the credentials, the savvy and the plain grit to be President of the United States. Jerry Ford put it so beautifully in his address: When his nation needed him to fly 58 combat missions during World War II, George answered America's call. When our intelligence agencies were under siege during the 1970s, George made a vital contribution to our national security by restoring their dignity and integrity.

I told the convention that, as Vice President, George Bush brilliantly served his nation's quest for peace by playing a vital role in the process that has led to the historic INF treaty that will eliminate an entire class of U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles.

He also led the battle on a quiet but absolutely critical front in our struggle to restore America's economic strength. I mean by this his determined attack on unnecessary government regulations that had our economy under siege, and were assailing job creation. Yes, if you are one of the many millions of Americans who has found a new job in the last eight years, one major reason that job exists, may well be George Bush.

And one other thing: George has always given me straight-from-the-shoulder advice and counsel on how we could advance our vision for the future. And he has always been candid with me when we disagreed.

That is the George Bush I know best. But there is also the George Bush who is a father of five, grandfather of 10, a devoted husband, a man never too busy to take the time to help a friend who needed him.

The strength and wisdom of George Bush was reflected in the strength and wisdom of the Republican Party itself—just as the energy and enthusiasm of the party were reflected in the energy and enthusiasm of Senator Dan Quayle. Dan was elected to the Senate on the day I was first elected President. Dan shares with George Bush and me a vision of an America and a world no longer threatened by the specter of nuclear attack. That is why Dan has labored with conviction for the Strategic Defense Initiative. And he shares a vision of opportunity for all Americans. That is why he has stood with George Bush and me through-out the fight to lower tax rates and increase opportunity for all Americans.

During the convention, our party's leaders came together in a display of force and grace: the no-nonsense wit and wisdom of Bob Dole, the intellectual dynamism of Jack Kemp, the big-hearted populism of Tom Kean, the Texas gusto of Phil Gramm and so many others.

And there were those who brought a special message of unity to the party. Like me, Jeane Kirkpatrick and Bill Bennett were once Democrats. Like me, they have found a home in the Republican Party. Yes, Bill and Jeane and all those who spoke proved that the Republican Party is a party proud of its vision for the future and ready to lay it out in detail.

Just look at the Republican platform. This 40,000-word document spells out the views of George Bush and our party on almost every major issue facing the nation today. Like it or not, and I like it, when you read it you know where George stands.

Now, compare it with the 4,000-word document passed by the opposition in Atlanta. That document is a plethora of platitudes, and it points out the difference between the two parties. Our friends in Atlanta will not tell you what they will do if they get elected, but George Bush and Dan Quayle already have.

George and Dan and our party have spread their road map out on the table for all to see, while the other guys will not tell us where they are going and will not even give us directions. It will take more than platitudes to convince the American people. It will take the courage to stand up for principle.

During the week of our convention, as in every week for the past eight years, George Bush has stood up for principle. He has been in on the tough decisions, working for peace through strength and prosperity through liberty. I am proud to stand with him.

THE PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

From the Mississippi
Economic Council

M/EIC

Mississippi's 1988 Legislature has secured for itself a place in tomorrow's history books by bringing reforms to county government that were long overdue.

The Legislature, called into special session by Governor Ray Mabus, could no longer ignore the will of the people of this state. Mississippians had grown tired of a system of county government that encouraged inefficiency and poor use of tax dollars. The people were demanding change.

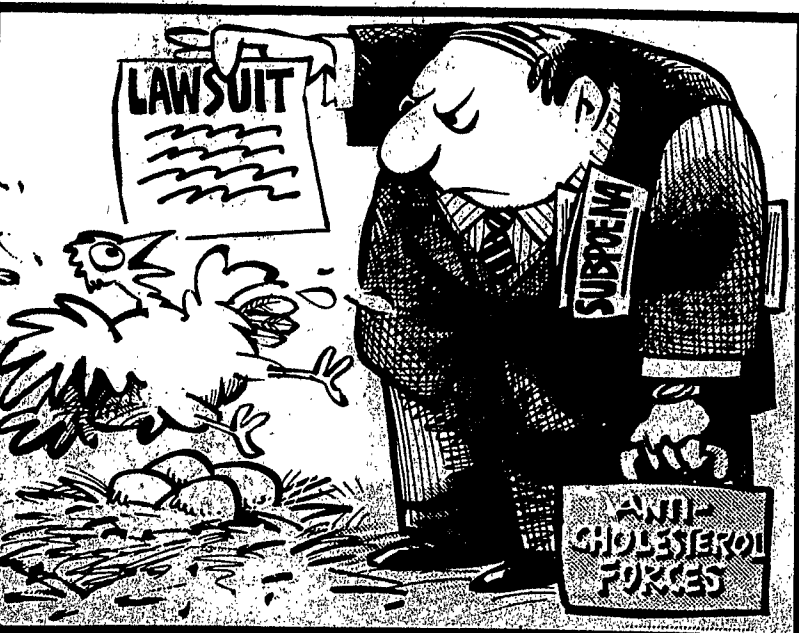

The bill passed by lawmakers does not make the full unit system mandatory but does allow voters in each county to decide on certain unit system principles.

One mandated feature of the system is required centralized purchasing in all counties beginning Oct. 1, 1989.

Voters will go to the polls in November to decide whether their county should establish a countywide administration and a road maintenance department headed by a road manager, or allow supervisors to handle road maintenance within their districts.

It is now up to the voters of this state to determine whether they want a system of county government that will take them into the 21st century or whether they will continue out-dated governmental practices of the past.

The choice is clear.

Side Street Crossings

By Dena Bisnette

Free concerts in the park remind me of a time I never saw, somewhere in America's past when such things were not rare and when families did things together.

Considering that the Bay St. Louis Business Association chose to present their concert on a weeknight, there were quite a few people around when the U.S. Air Force Top 40 Band, Skypower, played Wednesday in the park behind city hall.

It was easier to imagine a bygone era when the Gulf Coast Barbershop Quartet sang before and after Skypower's first set; I closed my eyes and could see my friends in the long dresses of the Gay '90s, carrying their parasols and being escorted by men with neat bowties and mustaches, but that's not entirely why Wednesday night seemed like a long time ago to me.

The climate wasn't too bad Wednesday night, but the heat probably helped the business association members sell soft drinks. People also seemed willing to fight the mosquitoes.

Several people told me they had come specifically to hear the barbershop singers, frequent performers in Hancock County who include several local singers.

Skypower seemed to attract a different set of people and included music most people know, such as "Dock of the Bay" and the medley of patriotic numbers that finished the set.

The concert didn't seem as well attended as the two previous events, one of which featured the Cajun band Laissez Faire and another that brought back a group that had performed at a Beachfront Festival, the U.S. Navy Show Band. I hope that was because the event was on a weeknight and that interest in such events is not dying out.

The concerts remind me of the old days mostly because families attend together. I have become so used to seeing parents go to one place while kids split up according to age groups and go to others that events like the concerts and the summer festivals here seem unusual to me.

There aren't enough events like that anymore. Families don't seem to have enough time together because what pleases the adults bores the teenagers and is too sophisticated for the little kids. Music, however, transcends age.

The concerts are also a rarity because they're free. Very few events are without an admission charge today.

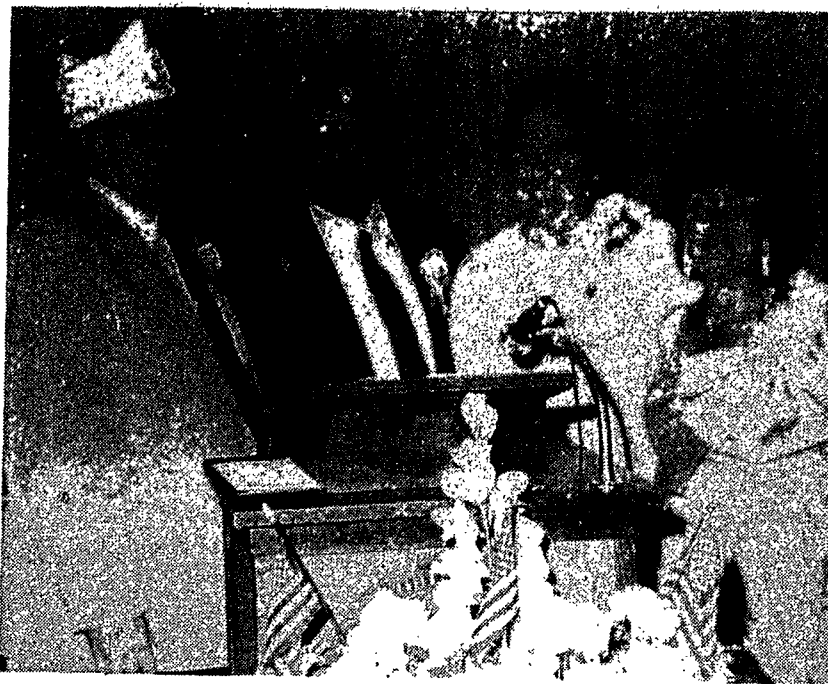

What I saw Wednesday was a few people dancing, children playing and friends visiting with each other in addition to people listening to music.

Now, why should all that seem so old-fashioned? Can you tell me?

The business association is doing something good with these events. Please-keeping coming to concerts. Even the most enthusiastic people give up if they find they have no support for an idea.

I have another question: When is the next one and who's the band?

What if I don't like the type of band? No problem. I always like visiting, and I expect plenty of people to be there to share conversation, music, soft drinks and mosquito bites.

Waveland man dies in fight over bicycle

A Waveland man remains in the Hancock County Jail accused of a Thursday night stabbing which left another man dead.

Jeffery Thomas, 25, of 215 Olivari St. was arrested by Waveland police at the scene of the knife, at the corner of Herlihy and Olivari Streets, about midnight Thursday.

The victim Ronald Joseph "Truck" Henry, 29, of 420 Clark St., Pass Christian also lived in Waveland, according to Police Chief Donald Dorn.

Dorn said Henry had been stabbed 12 to 15 times, and had wounds on his hands and chest.

Police recovered a kitchen knife at the scene.

The case is still under investigation, but Dorn said a fight over a bicycle led to the killing.

Contaminated soil rekindles Dubuisson's fight over dump

BY D.C. HARVILL

Nobody wants a dump in their backyard, especially a hazardous waste dump. The people of the Dubuisson Community aren't different from anyone else, except they do have a dump in their backyard.

Despite adamant opposition from the residents of the northwest Harrison County community, Dubuisson, earlier this year, became the site of Waste Management Incorporated's Pecan Grove Sanitary Landfill.

While the residents lost the battle to keep the landfill out of their neighborhood, they haven't given up. New fuel was added to their fight this week when trucks bearing Alabama license plates were seen arriving at the site.

"At first I thought they were hauling waste from out of state," said Mavis Newell, the resident who spotted the trucks and a member of the grassroots group Stop the Dump.

But upon further investigation, she discovered the trucks were hauling contaminated dirt from Columbus Air Force Base.

According to Newell, Bill Barnett, chief of the Mississippi Bureau of Pollution Control's groundwater protection division, said the trucks were hauling dirt contaminated with diesel fuel, but he didn't know who had approved it.

A letter from the state Bureau of Pollution Control giving the go ahead to dump the dirt at Pecan Grove was signed by Barnett.

According to an analysis of the dirt prepared for Waste Management by Advanced Chemistry Labs in Atlanta, and on which the Bureau of Pollution Control based its decision to allow the dumping, the dirt is contaminated by petroleum hydrocarbons in the amount of seven-tenths of one-percent.

Also indicated in trace amounts are benzene, cyanides, phenols, toluene, ethyl benzene, arsenic, barium, chromium, lead, and mercury.

"Most residents in the area get their drinking water from shallow wells, many less than 100 feet," Newell said; they are concerned that it will be contaminated.

According to Newell, when they first learned of plans for the dump they were told the clay under the site was impermeable, that the contaminants from the landfill could not get into the water table.

"We brought in Nolin Aughenbaugh, a world renowned geologist from the University of Mississippi. Using Waste Managements own soil borings he determined that there is 600 feet of sand under the site. He said it is unsafe," Newell said.

After Aughenbaugh's findings, Newell said, the permit for the landfill reduced the amount of land allowed for the site from 110 acres to 70.

Another recent incident which raised residents' ire involved a truck hauling 50 to 60 Port-O-Let drums and the possibility that human waste is being dumped at the site.

Newell said, a Waste Management representative told her the drums contained refuse from the mess hall at Keesler Air Force Base.

"I called Keesler and the man at the mess hall there told me he didn't know what I was talking about," Newell said. "He said it didn't make any sense that they would allow drums that had been in contact with human waste in the mess hall area of the base, even if they had been sanitized."

Newell added, that the Bureau of Pollution Control representative from Ocean Springs said he had seen the barrels but had not inspected them up-close and that he had been told they contained food waste.

One of the margins of safety allowed for in the dump has already been exceeded, Newell claims.

"They told us the dump could handle an eight inch rainfall on any given day. Well, just a couple weeks ago we had 10 inches in a 24 hour period. I want to know where the other two inches went. Whose property did it drain onto, or did it go into the river?" she asks.

"If the water table continues to fall, we're going to have to get our drinking water out of those rivers."

"It's a shame. The whole coast is going to suffer from this. It's going to hurt the fishing industry and it's going to hurt tourism."

Newell admits the fight has been long and expensive but claims that she and others are going to keep a close eye on activities at the dump and will take every opportunity to fight it.

"We hope to close the dump," she said, "that is what we set out to do and that is what we are going to do if we can."

"They are not going to contaminate the Coast!" she vows.

Commission recognized for returning $187,000 to 88-89 county budget

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission will be self-sufficient this year, rather than depending on the board of supervisors for funding.

Hancock County Board of Supervisors President Ronald Cuevas publicly commended the commission Thursday regarding its decision to turn over the funds normally budgeted to port and harbor to the supervisors for other purposes.

The commission was getting an appropriation of about $187,000 each year for operation of county industrial parks at Stennis Airport and Port Bienville as well as facilities at Bayou Cadet, Cuevas explained. Some of the funds are also used to encourage economic development.

When the supervisors felt a financial crunch because they had to more than double their budget for the county landfill, which will have to be closed and replaced with another solid waste disposal facility, Port and Harbor Director Harold Olsen told the board he felt his department could generate enough revenue this year to be self-sufficient.

The commission then volunteered to give up the funds. The money was instead given to Pearl River Community College, which serves a large percentage of Hancock County students and has had to turn down qualified students due to outgrown facilities.

The funds will be earmarked for construction at the campus in Poplarville as well as at the vocational-technical center the junior college operates at Stennis Airport, Cuevas stated.

"This will be beneficial to them as well as to the county," said Cuevas, stating that the improvements at the vocational-technical center will enable the junior college to offer courses in a number of areas needed but not presently offered.

He said he feels the commission's move was "somewhat of a sacrifice on their part, but is a definite sign of their interest in the labor force the county is developing."

"We knew the county was in need of funds and the port and harbor has been very fortunate to be able to do this," Olsen stated.

He said the commission feels the $187,000 will be "money well spent," particularly that portion to be used at the Hancock County site.

Although the commission is not included in this year's $12 million budget, scheduled for final adoption Sept. 15, the matter will be reviewed yearly and the port and harbor may be given funds in the future if they are needed.

Muscular Dystrophy telethon set Sept. 4, 5

BY DENA BISNETTE

For the 12th year, the Waveland Civic Association will sponsor its annual Labor Day Telethon for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

According to Coordinator Louis Smolensky, the telethon will begin at 6 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 4, and end at 5 p.m. Monday, Sept. 5 to coincide with the national Muscular Dystrophy telethon, which will be televised on New Orleans channels 26 and 9.

About 50 volunteers based at Waveland City Hall will man three telephone lines. Pledges may be made by calling 467-4134, 467-9248 or 467-9249.

The money collected in Hancock and West Harrison County will be used to assist local residents who suffer from muscular dystrophy, a group of neuromuscular diseases including about 40 disorders that have a combined effect on all age groups.

Smolensky said there are about 125 Gulf Coast residents with muscular dystrophy. The average amount a patient must spend on treatment and assistance due to the disorder is $2,500 each year.

The coordinator added that the telethon is geared to the entirety of Hancock County and all of West Harrison County rather than just the cities of Bay St. Louis, Waveland and Pass Christian.

This year's goal is $12,000. Last year, the event netted about $9,800, Smolensky said.

Helping with the telethon for the first time will be the Bay-Waveland Jaycees.

In addition, professional and volunteer fire departments

POLYMER SCIENCE RESEARCH FACILITY

GROUNDBREAKING SCHEDULED—An official groundbreaking ceremony is planned Aug. 29 for a new $10 million polymer science research facility at the University of Southern Mississippi. The ceremony will begin with addresses in Bigelow Auditorium of the Owings-McQuagge Hall at 11 a.m., followed by groundbreaking at the site at 11:30 a.m. The 86,000-square-foot facility will be located just west of Sunset Drive on Campus Drive on the USM campus. The public is invited to attend the ceremony.

Construction starts on USM's polymer center

By Sharon Ward
Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., will be the keynote speaker Monday during groundbreaking ceremonies for the University of Southern Mississippi's planned $10 million Polymer Science Research Facility.

The official ceremony will begin with addresses by Cochran, USM Polymer Science Department Chairman Dr. Gordon Nelson, USM President Dr. Aubrey K. Lucas and others in Bigelow Auditorium of Owings-McQuagge Hall at 11 a.m.

Groundbreaking ceremonies at the construction site will follow at 11:00 a.m. for the 86,000-square-foot research center, which also will house a pilot plant production line.

Cochran and Mississippi Representatives Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., and Tent Lott, R-Miss., were instrumental in obtaining a congressional appropriation for construction of the project last year as part of the Critical Agricultural Materials Act.

The three-story building, to be located just west of Sunset Drive on the USM campus is expected to be completed by August, 1990. Finlo Construction Company of Hattiesburg was the low bidder for the project, which gained final approval from the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning earlier this summer.

Congressional funding for Construction and equipment to date has totaled almost $14.25 million—including a $500,000 planning and design allocation in 1985, last year's appropriation of almost $10 million and, more recently, nearly $4 million for the purchase of laboratory equipment.

The facility will increase the interaction between the Polymer Science Department and other departments on campus, as well as with Mississippi industry," predicted Dr. Gerald Mattson, associate chairman of the department.

Nelson—who serves as president of the internationally prestigious, 138,000-member American Chemical Society—predicted the USM center will help attract polymer-related industries to Mississippi, and promote agriculture through the sale of raw materials needed by polymer manufacturers.

He said Mississippi has a quarter-of-a-billion-dollar plastics industry, including some 210 companies employing 19,000 workers.

Low-weight and high-strength polymers are used by industry for a variety of functions that range from microwave-ready food containers and bullet-proof vests to artificial hearts, space suits, computer laser-writing capabilities and coatings that reduce drag on sea-going vessels.

A pilot plant production line at the center will allow scientists to produce plastic parts and end-use products that may be tested under actual manufacturing conditions to better forecast their usefulness and durability, Mattson explained.

USM's research and development capabilities will be extended through the small-scale commercial operation, and a vast number of raw materials found in the state will prove useful to the efforts by the department.

Inventors seminar slated at Jeff Davis

Paula Helwick Seminars will be hosting an Inventor's Seminar starting in September entitled, 'So You Think You've Got a Million-Dollar Idea.' The seminar, which consists of two separate phases, will be held at Jefferson Davis Junior College in Biloxi.

Phase I, the first two-week seminar entitled, 'Stimulating the Creative Mind,' will include such topics as ways to stimulate creativity, checklist for product ideas, an extensive resource guide, and ideas for much-needed inventions.

Phase II, entitled 'Getting

Down to Business' will include such topics as market research, developing a prototype, patenting your product, and marketing your invention, as well as featuring three local guest speakers, Alex Norcross, patent attorney; Don Attilio, with The Great Biloxi Economic Development Foundation (GBEDF); and Dottie Overall, with the Small Business Administration.

Paula Helwick, who is presently under contract with GBEDF to get several of her product ideas on the market, created this seminar to help local aspiring inventors.

There will be two Phase I classes scheduled for the month of September, the first class starting Sept. 6 and the second class starting Sept. 20. There will be one Phase II class scheduled to start Oct. 4. Classes will be held on Tuesdays from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Each phase will cover then topics over a two-week period, totaling five hours per phase.

Advance ticket purchases by mail receive a 20 percent discount.

Fees for the seminar are Phase I, $45; and phase II, $55.

Total for both phases with discount is $80.

'Project Grandpa' male influence to children's center

BY DENA BISNETTE

Students at the Hancock County Child Development Center have a new activity on Tuesday mornings, when they visit with their "grandfathers."

"Project Grandpa" brings elderly men and preschool children together for about 45 minutes each week. The senior citizens participate as the children go through pre-planned activities, such as playing with learning toys.

Brother Canisius of St. Stanislaus, who for 12 years has brought high school students to the center as part of Project Do, developed the idea for "Project Grandpa" and hand-picked the six volunteers for the program.

"I wanted to give them some exposure to senior citizens," he said as he stood in the midst of a group of four-year-olds. "They need a male image too."

He said he wants to start a similar project with elderly women, but tackled the idea using men first because it was the harder of the two.

"It's easy to get women.

They're willing to volunteer. Some of the men were a little afraid to come at first, but I pointed out to them that they all have grandchildren. One has 17 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren."

Center Director Lora Pittman said she was very pleased with the initial visit as she watched the children calling the volunteers "Grandpa" within a few minutes of their arrival.

"They seem to really enjoy the male attention. When we have the St. Stanislaus students and they stop coming during summer vacation, we get young girls instead, but the children keep asking when the boys are coming back," she said. "They don't get a lot of opportunity to work with men because we are all females working here."

"I think we're really going to enjoy having the older people visit. Things seem to get a lot more manageable when there are older men around."

Pittman explained that many of the children come from single-parent homes and do not have as much exposure to male role model as children with both parents present in the home.

Brother Canisius said that by interacting with the children in learning activities, the men are not made to feel as if they are babysitters.

"That's why I wanted them inside instead of out in the yard. There isn't much you can do in the yard except watch the kids or maybe chase after them," he said.

Pittman agreed, stating that she feels the men fit well into the pre-planned activities.

"It wouldn't work if you just took one of these volunteers and said, 'Here are your three kids.' The children accept them this way," she explained.

Frank Cain, who was helping a child match up colored beads on an abacus-like device, said he was enjoying his first visit to the center very much.

"I have always liked children. I have grandchildren, but they live in another state."

Joy Burnet, seated at a table with a small boy proudly showing him a picture he had just colored, said the visit brought back memories.

"I've never been with real little kids before, except my own, and that was 30 years ago," he said.

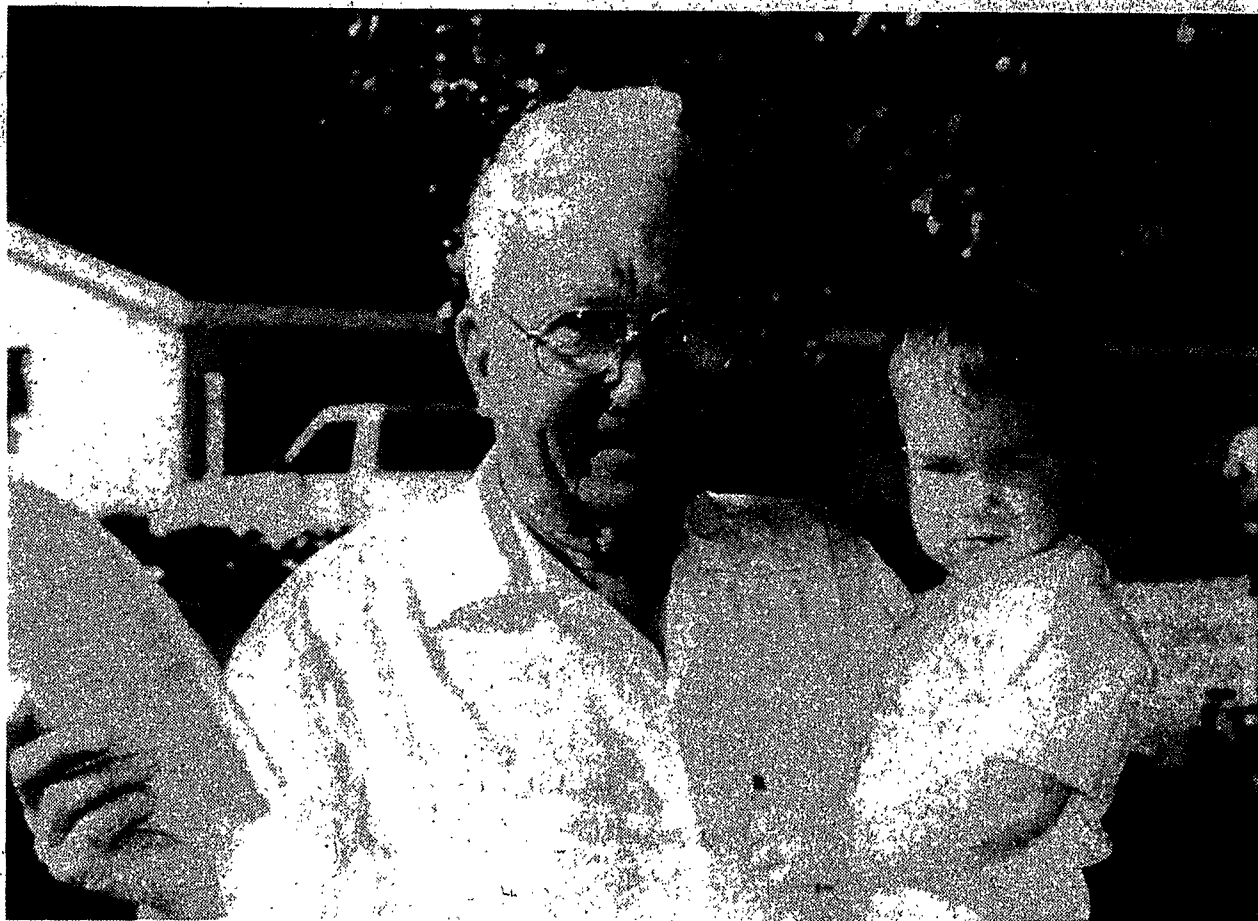

Other volunteers included George DiBenedetto, Tom Flynn and Owen McArdle Jr.

Henry Lang, who is also a volunteer, was not able to attend the first day and made a personal visit to the center the previous day to let the staff know he still wants to participate in the program.

Brother Albert Guarino of St. Stanislaus took Lang's place and spent part of the morning reciting nursery rhymes to some of the smallest children.

Pittman said the smaller children were not included in the group inside the center with the volunteers the first day, but were instead left on the playground with Brother Albert and several staff members.

As the program develops, the younger students at the center will participate more.

GATES OF HEAVEN

On the surface, Errol Morris' film 'Gates of Heaven' is about pet cemeteries and their owners. Beneath the surface, however, is a much more complex theme.

Included on Roger Ebert's all-time-10-best-films list, 'Gates of Heaven' at 10 p.m. Friday, Sept. 2, on Mississippi ETV's film series 'P.O.V.' grows from its simple premise to encompass larger issues, including love, immortality, failure and the dogged elusiveness of the American Dream.

WEDDINGS, ENGAGEMENTS

Levy-Goldner

Oxon Hill Manor, Oxon Hill, Md. was the setting for the August 7 wedding of Pamela Renee Goldner and Donald Morris Levy Jr., both of Washington, D.C.

The bride wore a waltz-length, ivory satin gown featuring a scoop neckline, long satin sleeves with a basque waistline and full skirt. A detachable bustle was set off with a satin flower. Her ivory veil of illusion featured a detachable cathedral train. She carried ivory long-stemmed roses.

Maid of honor for her sister was Melinda Goldner of Boston, Mass.

Other attendants included Ellen Houston of Denver, Colo.; Kathy Page, cousin of the bride of Ormond Beach, Fla.; and Trisha Thomas, Washington, D.C.

A reception at the Oxon Hill Manor was followed by a dinner buffet and dancing to a jazz quartet.

She's Home!

By Fr. Jerome LeDoux, SVD

It had been almost three weeks since the young lady had left home without telling anyone where she was going. Being an adult, one could not say that she had run away from home. Still, in today's world of senseless violence, her family worried very much.

Days dragged past while her family wondered aloud, praying and waiting for the phone call which never came. Speculation, of course, was their only device and their worst enemy. Finally, unexpectedly, the long-awaited call came.

"I'm fine, Mom! I'm on my way home!"

By the time the news got around to me she was already home. It was almost as if the family was announcing the event of the year to all comers. Come to think of it, for them it was indeed the event of the year in more ways than one.

"She's home!" had such a familiar ring that I ran straight to my Bible and looked for the story of the woman who lost a silver piece and swept her whole house until she found it. "I found it!" spread the good news to all the neighbors.

Compared with the incident of the young lady returning home, that parable of Jesus took on an entirely different light. The parables, the stories of Jesus are reenacted in our day by all the people around us and under many differing circumstances.

"She's home!" is paralleled by literally millions of stories boiling up live from today's homes, streets, schools, jobs and churches. Each one is quite similar to the other, yet every one is very personal, intimate and individual.

What we usually fail to do is relate today's stories directly to the parables and stories of Jesus. Each of our stories of today are just as valid as the stories of Jesus. In fact, Jesus obviously intended that we live out each episode of our life as the event in the kingdom of God which it really is.

It is evident that Jesus intended every little thing we experience to be as valid a story of the kingdom as anything which he ever related in his time. From the smallest pieces of good news to the most important, we must relate them to the kingdom.

"She has kicked the habit!" is a dynamite charge of good news when it refers to someone who has gone cold turkey or somehow managed to rid herself of the curse of nicotine addiction. It is a great story worthy of the kingdom of God.

"He is finally off drugs!" is likewise a great line which may have even weightier implications. The reign of God can rejoice.

There are much more tender lines, yet lines of great power and joy: "It's a girl!" "It's a boy!"

"I have found a job!" is a modern-day exclamation rivaling the search and discovery of the silver coin in the Gospel (Luke 15:8). This joy, too, is but another story in the reign of God.

None of these or any other stories and episodes in the life of any child, woman or man should be viewed, understood or celebrated apart from their belonging directly to our life in the kingdom of God. This gives them their only real meaning.

"She graduated today!" can be just as heady and exhilarating in the way of good news as, "He is out of the hospital, and he is quite alive and well!"

"Rejoice with me!" said the woman in the parable of Jesus. We cannot say that too often to each other, thanks to Jesus.
